Autumn and Winter.

By SWINBURNE.

The publication of these beautiful roundels commemorating the death of a great musican and his friend, is suggested by the death of Mr. Theodore Thomas, the great orchestral leader of Chicago.

The portruit, autograph and biographical sketch of A. C. Swinburne have already appeared in this series.

THREE months bade wane and wax the wintering moon Between two dates of death, while men were fain Yet of the living light that all too soon Three months bade wane.

Cold autumn, wan with wrath of wind and rain, Saw pass a soul sweet as the sovereign tune That death smote silent when he smote again.

First went my friend, in life's mid light of noon, Who loved the lord of music: then the strain Whence earth was kindled like as heaven in June Three months bade wane.

II. A herald soul before its master's flying Touched by some few moons first the darkling goal Where shades rose up to greet the shade, espying A herald soul;

Shades of dead lords of music, who control Men living by the might of men undying, With strength of strains that make delight of dole.

The deep dense dust on death's dim threshold lying Trembled with sense of kindling sound that stole Through darkness, and the night gave ear, descrying A herald soul.

One went before, one after, but so fast They seem gone hence together, from the shore Whence we now gaze: yet ere the mightier passed One went before:

One whose whole heart of love, being set of yore On that high joy which music lends us, cast Light round him forth of music's radiant store.

Then went, while earth on winter glared aghast, The mortal god he worshipped, through the door Wherethrough so late, his lover to the last,

One went before. A star had set an hour before the sun

Sank from the skies wherethrough his heart's pulse yet

A star had set, All heaven rings back, sonorous with regret, The deep dirge of the sunset: how should one

Thrills audibly: but few took heed, or none,

Soft star be missed in all the concourse met? But. O sweet single heart whose work is done, Whose songs are silent, how should I forget That ere the sunset's fiery goal was won

A CARD.

Having been recently asked by a firm of paint manufacturers, in an open letter published in this paper, if we would sell their paint, we take this opportunity of stating to them, to the public generally, and paint users particularly; that we do not concede the superiority of other paints over our "Standard" Ready-Mixed House Paint. We think the best evidence of quality is that shown by duplication of orders, and this is so customary, wherever we sell "Standard" Liquid Faint, that we are satisfied our customers agree with us as to the high quality of the paint. It takes an unusual amount of oil, covers spiendidly presents a beautiful appearance when finished, and, best of all, it lasts well.

CATON TO RUN ON HIS OWN MERITS

Alexandria Candidate for Lieu tenant-Governor Has Formed No Combination.

NOT OPPOSING MR. WILLARD

In Primary There Is No Conflict Between Aspirants for Different Places.

Hon. J. R. Oaton, of Alexandria, mem er of the General Assembly and candldate for the Democratic nomination for Lieutenant-Governor, arrived in the city last night and is at Murphy's Hotel. Mr Caton stated last night that he was here on legal business to take depositions in a candidacy on that of Captain Joseph E. Willard for the gubernatorial nomination, and the intimation that his candidacy was calculated to injure the prospects of Captain Willard, Mr. Caton sated that he was standing purely upon his own merits, that he was not running at the request of, or at the suggestion or wish of any one, nor in the interest of any candidate for the governorship. He relatrated with emphasis that he had formed no combination of any sort or description with any aspirant for the governorship senatorship or other place on the ticket, and that he had no idea of forming any such combination. Mr. Caton expressed himself as on the friendlest terms with both Captain Willard and Mr. Swanson.

Not Affect Willard's Chances. candidacy on that of Captain Joseph E.

both Captain Willard and Mr. Swanson.

Not Affect Willard is Chances.

Commenting upon the fact that both he and Captain Willard live in the same congressional district, Mr. Caton said that list fact might have had an important the nomination were to be made in convention, but that it had absolutely none upon the situation in a primary where all the candidates were nominated at one and the same time and by secret ballot. There was nothing to hinder everyman in the district from voting for both Captain Willard and himself, if they so desired, and there could be no conflict between them. Mr. Caton stated that he was advised by friends in the General Assembly to become a candidate for the loutenant governorship, and had made up the man in the district from worth that Mr. Swanson would be an aspirant for the nomination.

Mr. Caton was especially emphatic in denying that he had made or contemplated making any combination of any sort with any candidate for the nomination, either for the governorship or the senatorship.

Thus far the only announced candidate besides Mr. Caton for the second place on the ticket is Captain Charles T. Bland, of Portsmouth, for years a member of the General Assembly, Mr. J. Alston Caboll, of Richmond, a prominent member of the bar of this city, has been suggested as a possible candidate, and that he is at least tentatively a candidate, and that he is at least tentatively a candidate, and that he is a friends in other portions of the State.
